Here's a time-saver
that's extra tasty, thanks to Peter Pan's ever-fresh flavor!

Here's the Secret!

No floating oil to get rancid!
Peter Pan stays sweet and fresh... keeps its natural vitamins and energy value, too.

Now there are 2 kinds of ever-fresh Peter Pan!

Smooth... America's favorite!
The smoothest peanut butter made,
by actual test—so creamy-good it fairly melts in your mouth. Rich with savory, fresh-roasted peanut flavor. Look for it in the familiar Red Top Jar.

Crunchy... New and Delicious!
Tasty, crunchy bits of fresh-roasted peanuts mixed all through creamy-smooth Peter Pan Peanut Butter.
The peanut bits stay mixed in, never rise to top. Look for it in the Green Top Jar.

Never sticks to the roof of your mouth

NOW! TONI HOME PERMANENT TWICE AS EASY—TWICE AS FAST

Which Twin has the Toni? (See answer below)

new SPIN curler

Cuts winding time in half—makes it double-easy!

New exclusive Toni SPIN Curler grips . . . spins . . . locks with a flick of the finger. No rubber bands! All plastic, all-in-one! Nothing to tangle up in your hair! Non-slip grip holds hair-tips securely so even the shortest ends become easy to manage! Easy-spin action—built right in—rolls each curl up in one quick motion! Snaps shut! Assures a better, longer-lasting curl. Winds more hair on each curler. Makes winding twice as easy!

SPECIAL COMBINATION OFFER

new FASTER process

Gives you the most natural-looking wave ever!

New Photo Method Directions show how Toni waves hair in as little as 30 minutes! No other home permanent waves hair faster yet leaves it so soft and lustrous. For the Toni Waving Lotion is the same gentle lotion that has given over 67 million lovely permanents. Try this exciting Toni with new SPIN Curlers and see how quickly you give yourself the most natural-looking wave you've ever had!

New Toni Refill Kit. Guaranteed to give you the most natural-looking wave you've ever had—or your money back! Waves many types of hair in as little as 30 minutes! $1.00

Complete Set of New Toni SPIN Curlers. No more rubber bands. Makes every wave from now on twice as easy. ($2 when bought separately.) $1.29

Both for $2.29

"Now we're both Toni Twins," says Katherine Ring, of Chicago, Ill. "When I saw how easy it was for Kathleene to give herself a Toni with the new SPIN Curlers I decided on a Toni, too!"

WARNERETTE only $3<sup>50</sup>

You need both these girdles to be doubly darling. One that curbs your curves, one that goes a step further and higher to whittle your waist as well.

Here they are—two Warner's lovelies that will make you look and feel like a million without costing you a pretty penny.

Don't let your middle go to waist. STA-UP-TOP WARNERETTE #634 features that famous waist-band that won't roll over... the same band you find on Warner's girdles costing up to four times as much.

Always belittlin'. WARNERETTE #366 is a honey to have handy. It tames your lines when you're wearing clothes that don't call for such a little middle.

In 7 wonderful ways both are wonderful buys

1. The free 'n easy knitted feel of two-way elastic that slims your hips, trims your tummy, flattens your derriere.
2. All 'round seamless fit that tapers where you taper, smoothes you in one sleek, unbroken line.
3. Best friend your nylons ever had! Warnerettes have 6 elastic garters that spare your stockings by distributing the support... make it so easy to keep stocking seams straight.
4. A snappy, lively, elastic band at the bottom "steps out" when you do without losing its slimming control.
5. A parade of pastels to choose from... white, pink or blue. Warnerette #366 also comes in bewitching black.
6. They're pinchless! They're matchless! They wash in a wink... fit like a dream... wear forever and then some.

7. Both come in freedom lovin' pantie girdles. At leading stores everywhere.

LETTERS TO THE EDITORS

GREATEST PAINTER?

Sirs:

Answering your query (LIFE, Aug. 8), "Jackson Pollock—Is he the greatest living painter in the U.S.?" I submit a photograph of my son, Dennis Michael O'Sullivan, a 5½-year-old contemporary of the Pollock trend in art with his latest effort, Number Ninety-nine.

MRS. F. D. O'SULLIVAN JR.
Avondale Estates, Ga.

O'SULLIVAN AND WORK

Sirs:

Based on 23¢ per square inch for Jackson Pollock's Number Nine, Angell's Number One (below) is valued at only $21.65. However, a further calculation shows my time to be worth $259.80 an hour, since I can turn them out all day at the rate of one every five minutes.

PRESTON W. ANGELL
Arlington, Va.

ANGELL'S "NUMBER ONE"

Sirs:

... I have an old garage door on which I have cleaned paint brushes for several years. It is rather similar to Pollock's Number Seventeen. The first $1,500 takes it.

P. B. PERRAULT
West Palm Beach, Fla.

Sirs:

In my opinion as a long-time and proud collector of his paintings, Jackson Pollock is the greatest painter in the U.S. My enthusiastic opinion is shared by my wife, mother and children. We have never tired of our Pollock paintings which, for us, have the emotional appeal of great music. ...

REGINALD R. ISAACS
Chicago, Ill.

Sirs:

I for one appreciate the efforts of Jackson Pollock. The long work called Number Nine would make a splendid wallpaper panel, and the others would be exciting as fabric prints. Of course they are not paintings.

BURTON KESSENICK
Palos Verdes Estates, Calif.

Sirs:

Is Jackson Pollock the greatest living U.S. painter? No!

FRANK CARSELLI
Holley, N.Y.

Sirs:

... Is he a painter?

FRED BOSHAVEN JR.
Grand Rapids, Mich.

Sirs:

... Why use the word "living" so loosely?

PEGGY DOBBRATZ ABERNETHY
Vergennes, Vt.

● When Pollock's Number Seventeen was exhibited recently in a Provincetown, Mass. art gallery, the question, "Is he the greatest living painter in the U.S.?" was posted alongside the painting and a ballot box set up nearby. After several days the voting stood at 13 yeses, 153 noes.—ED.

CLOISTERED CONVENTS

Sirs:

In your article, "Nuns' Sanctuary" (LIFE, Aug. 8), after stating that Thomas Merton's The Seven Storey Mountain acquainted the American public with the existence of the century-old Trappist monastery in Kentucky, you add, "Such a sanctuary for women was started two years ago at Bethlehem, Conn." A reader would hardly deduce that the U.S. has been dotted with such sanctuaries for years.

The Carmelite nuns alone have 36 strictly cloistered convents in this country. The Poor Clares, a branch of the Franciscan family, have 17 such convents, and the Dominican nuns have 16 convents with strict enclosure. There are other contemplative orders, such as the Visitation nuns and the Passionist nuns. Women in contemplative orders also put in a good day's work within the cloister. What Merton says of the Trappists has its parallel for cloistered nuns: "And they worked with their hands ... made their own furniture and their own coarse clothing. ... But, of course, the important thing is that 'their prayer flexed its strong sinews' and there arose 'the patient anguish of their supplication to God.'"

BERTRAND WEAVER, C.P.
West Springfield, Mass.

WIRE CLIMBER

Sirs:

In the article called "Arms for Europe" (LIFE, Aug. 8) there is a very odd-looking picture. Is the man in the lower right-hand picture walking that wire, or has he fallen off one of them? If not, just what is he doing? I'm quite worried for his safety.

NORMAN SMITH
St. Cloud, Fla.

● He is demonstrating the proper method of crossing a stream on a wire.—ED.

RITA'S DRESS

Sirs:

Regarding Macy's copy of Rita's wedding dress for $18.74 (LIFE, Aug. 8), you state "Nobody looked like Rita except Rita." What you should have said was "Nobody looked like Rita except Esther Binder, who looked better."

BETTER THAN RITA?

EMEROY MOORHEAD

Washington, D.C.

BURBLING, TINGLING, PITYING

Sirs:

Not every motorcyclist is as competitive as the respectable clubmen of Southern California (LIFE, Aug. 8).

I delight in riding leisurely through the hills of New England. Fall is my favorite season.

Well bundled against the weather I cruise along, the exhaust burbling cheerfully. Leaves scud across the highway. Who cares if the sky darkens? A rain squall makes the cheeks tingle. The golden hills reflect the sunshine which follows. Roadside coffee—what a drink—good companions and motorcycle yarns.

Pity the poor fellows in automobiles, hurrying somewhere, sealed in their steel and glass houses.

HALBERT F. SPEER

New York, N.Y.

ARMY AND NAVY FASHIONS

Sirs:

Speaking of five-and-ten-cent store costumes (LIFE, Aug. 8), here is one whipped up from Bruskin's Army and Navy Store (or any other in the same line) from such prosaic items as four farm-variety bandanas and two horse blanket pins (the latter from Fisher's Horse Goods Emporium)...

Bridgeton, N.J.

SPELLMAN vs. ROOSEVELT

Sirs:

... Cardinal Spellman, whose controversy with Mrs. Roosevelt you discussed in an editorial (LIFE, Aug. 8), is undoubtedly a patriotic American.

He cannot be blamed either for being a zealous churchman. He is thinking of this completely from the point of view of freedom of the church to expand and freedom of parents to choose their school. But, much as our children today need better religious education, some other way must be found to secure it. It sounds like a cruel choice, but the single purpose of public education is to further democracy—not to further any religious group!

DOROTHY M. TRACY

Wahoo, Neb.

Sirs:

... The Constitution hasn't been weakened one iota by the GI Bill of Rights, the R.O.T.C., the Lunch Act, or other aid to schools in which Catholic institutions have shared. Let's be fair about this.

PATRICIA JOHNSTON

New York, N.Y.

Sirs:

LIFE's basis for opposing federal aid to education on the grounds that it leads to unnecessary and dangerous extension of federal power shows shallow reasoning and is totally unfounded.

I would advise you to make a journey through the primary and secondary educational institutions of the South (or better still, teach a year in them) before you oppose the Barden Bill. The material good which this money would do for the schools in that area outweighs heavily any remote danger of federal control...

AMERICA'S FINEST CIG

Largest and most fully equipped cigarette research laboratory in America is your guarantee that Luckies are a finer cigarette!

YOU SEE HERE the largest and most complete laboratory of its kind operated by any cigarette manufacturer in America.

For many years Lucky Strike scientists have delved into cigarette research on an extensive scale. Out of this has grown an elaborate system of quality control. Every step in the making of Luckies—from before the tobacco is bought until the finished cigarette reaches you—comes under the laboratory's watchful eye. As you read this, a constant stream of tobacco . . . samples from every tobacco-growing area . . . is flowing into the laboratory in Richmond, Virginia. These samples are scientifically analyzed, and reports of their quality go to the men who buy at auction for the makers of Lucky Strike.

Armed with this confidential, scientific information—and their own sound judgment—these men go after finer tobacco. This fine tobacco—together with scientifically controlled manufacturing methods—is your assurance that there is no finer, more enjoyable cigarette than Lucky Strike!

So round, so firm, so fully packed. Typical of many special devices designed to maintain the highest standards of cigarette quality, this mechanism helps to avoid loose ends . . . makes doubly sure your Lucky is so round, so firm, so fully packed.

So free and easy on the draw. This meter draws air through the cigarette, measures the draw. Samples are tested to see if they are properly filled. Tests like this one are your guarantee that the Luckies you smoke are truly free and easy on the draw.

Why Luckies smoke evenly—not too fast, not too slow. This apparatus, together with many other technical devices, evaluates the smoking qualities of a cigarette—guarantees that your Lucky Strike smokes properly—smoothly and evenly.

ARETTE LABORATORY

Testing tobacco. Samples from every tobacco-growing area are analyzed before and after purchase. These extensive scientific analyses, along with the expert judgment of Lucky Strike buyers, assure you that the tobacco in Luckies is fine, light and mild.

. . . CITY PRANKSTERS RAISE WATERY HAVOC AT HYDRANT

One hot, steaming afternoon recently in downtown New York the usually peaceful corner of Sullivan and Third Streets was suddenly transformed into a watery bedlam. A few boys had turned on a water hydrant, an old summer pastime, and were trying out some new tricks. Unable to direct the powerful stream of water by hand, they hit on the idea of deflecting it with a garbage can top, which one of them would hold against the hydrant with his back (opposite page and sketch above) while another aimed with it. The results were terrific. They were able to command the whole intersection with towering spurts of water that drenched pedestrians and so flooded passing automobiles that drivers had to stop and open their doors to empty out the back seats.

Photographer Alexander Marshack, who was working nearby, heard the commotion and ran over. In the half hour before the cops came he was able, by some nimble footwork, to take the exciting shots shown here. He was soaked and so was his camera but the film was unharmed.

A PASSER-BY, trying to get out of well-aimed water, is beset by two of the youths, who prevent his escape. He squirms, kicks and raises his leg to no avail.

Smart women use all 3 kinds of Borden's Milk!

SAYS ELSIE, THE BORDEN COW

2. EVAPORATED

Borden's Milk helps your baby bloom...makes cooking smoother!

Borden's Evaporated Milk is pure, sweet milk from which only the water is removed, and Vitamin D content increased to 400 units in every pint.

It's a standard for infant feeding. Accepted by the Council on Foods and Nutrition of the American Medical Association. See how your baby blooms on Borden's Evaporated Milk.

And be sure to try Borden's Evaporated Milk in sauces, soups, puddings. Try it in your coffee, too. It brings out the rich full coffee flavor—makes coffee taste extra delicious!

1. FRESH BOTTLED

Borden's Milk helps build you up and keep you up!

Have you heard or read the new milk recommendations by our government's dietitians? They urge three glasses of milk daily for an adult and a quart for a child.

So your Borden's Milk is a vitally important item in your diet . . . because of the body-building protein it provides . . . because of its milk sugar which recharges your energy . . . because of the milk vitamins and minerals so necessary for good bones, good teeth, even good looks

And here's something to keep in mind—milk gives you more nourishment for what you spend than any other food. Penny for penny, your best food buy is milk!

So enjoy delicious Borden's Milk with meals, with your luncheon sandwich, with your "snacks." As you probably know, Borden's Milk in dry form is widely used in making good bread more nutritious.

3. CONDENSED

LIFE'S COVER

The girls on this week's cover, Ann Hemenway (facing camera) and Mary Mohr, are wearing two new "swipes" from boys' clothing, a fashion trend. Other trends are reported on pages 66 to 71. One is the crew cap (Mary Lewis, $3). The other is the Brooks Brothers shirt, now made in pink for girls, worn by Miss Hemenway. Miss Hemenway recently interrupted a modeling career to become a $20-a-week waitress at Sea Island, Ga. Now, however, she has resumed her more lucrative $20-an-hour work in New York. Miss Mohr last week changed her name to Uhl by marrying a man of that name.

How we retired with $200 a month

WE'RE having a wonderful time, Betty and I. We're doing all the things we've always dreamed of doing. We're really living. Summers, we pack the car and take trips. And it's all thanks to a check for $200 that comes by mail, regular as clockwork, every month!

The neighbors think we're rich. Hardly any of them guess the truth. Actually, almost anyone can provide the regular income we have—if he starts young enough.

Luckily for me, I was about forty when Betty began to worry about our future. "You're going to want to slow up in a few years," she'd say. And I'd laugh. Because I felt fine. "But you won't always want to work," she'd say. "Well, I still have twenty good earning years ahead of me," I'd answer.

But one day she stopped me. She asked me how much I'd earn in the next twenty years—not counting raises. I did some quick arithmetic, multiplying my salary by 20. It ran up into six figures! I gave her the answer, and grinned.

Betty wasn't impressed. "How much of that do you think we'll save?" she asked. I had to be honest. We were always paying off on a new car or a radio, or going places. "A thousand or two," I admitted.

"That's just our trouble," she said. "We can't seem to save. That's why you ought to take out one of those retirement income plans. And now."

I could see that Betty was right. Most of that money I'd make in the next 20 years would go—as it always did—unless I made some systematic plan for our future then and there. So I looked into the subject and discovered a wonderful plan called the Phoenix Mutual Retirement Income Plan.

It was a way I could make part of my salary now buy me a retirement income later. All I needed was to start in time. It seemed made for folks like us.

With a Phoenix Mutual Plan, I could get a check for $200 a month for life, starting in 20 years, when I reached 60.

Betty and I were both mighty happy the day I applied and qualified for my Phoenix Mutual Retirement Income Plan. Right away it gave us a wonderful feeling of security. But the big day came, twenty years later, when our first Phoenix Mutual monthly check for $200 arrived in the mail. I retired. And Betty and I are having the time of our lives—with no money worries.

MAN'S DEEPEST DIVE UNDERSEA VETERAN IN A TINY STEEL SPHERE

EXPLORES UNKNOWN WATERS 4,500 FEET DOWN

In the black depths of the sea, far below the rolling, sunlit swells of its surface, there is a world that man in all his million years on earth has never seen. It is a world of bitter cold, eternal darkness and crushing pressure where beautiful and monstrous creatures, molded into fantastic forms by the extremes of their strange environment, dart and drift in the pale light given off by their own phosphorescent bodies. It is a world without sun or season, immense, changeless and as mysterious as space itself.

Ten days ago, as time is reckoned on the surface of the earth, a small steel sphere descended slowly into this unknown ocean wilderness. Dangling at the end of a threadlike cable, it bobbed foolishly in the sweeping currents. From above its tiny glass port a beam of light poked into the endless gloom, then flickered and went out. Inside the 5-foot ball Otis Barton, a rugged, 48-year-old Harvard man with a long record of undersea experience, hunched his shoulders against the creeping cold and spoke through chattering teeth into the telephone that was his only link with the world of men, "Drop me down another 500 feet." The sphere swayed and jerked, then stopped. Barton was 4,500 feet down, farther than any man had gone before. For eight minutes he pressed his face against the thick glass, fascinated by the strange animals outside—animals that no other man had ever seen. Outside the glass the ocean creatures stared back, at the face of the first human (above) to invade their world.

DIVE BEGINS as the benthoscope is lowered into the ocean from deck of an 80-foot barge rented by Hancock Foundation, Barton's sponsor. Sphere is held by single  $\frac{3}{8}$  inch steel cable, which developed kink during testing and had to be mended. Other lines are for electricity and telephone. Twisting of the benthoscope caused trouble in power cable.

HIS RECORD DIVE OVER, BARTON IS PULLED OUT OF SMALL BENTHOSCOPE DOOR

SPHERE WAS LOWERED INTO VALLEY

For his record-breaking dive into the Pacific, Barton picked a spot 30 miles off the coast of southern California, near Smuggler's Cove on the island of Santa Cruz. Here, amidst a range of undersea mountains, there is a broad basin whose floor lies 6,450 feet below the surface. Into this valley went Barton in his steel sphere, which he calls a benthoscope after the Greek words benthos (sea bottom) and skopein (to view).

Throughout his descent, Barton kept up a running conversation by telephone with his colleagues on the surface and made sketches of some of the things he saw (below). At 460 feet, as he peered into the darkening waters, he reported excitedly, "There are a lot of lantern fish passing by now. They're jumping all over. Now the fireworks are really starting. There's a creature that looks like a long pipe with a row of lights along it. . . . The tentacles of a jellyfish just dragged by the window and broke into a shower of sparks." At 1,500 feet: "It's just like sitting in an icebox. I'd hate to touch the walls here. . . . I'm wrapped in a blanket now." At 2,500 feet: "I see a barrage of luminescent shrimp spiraling outside the window. They give off a flash when they hit. . . . This is an unbelievable world."

At 4,000 feet the benthoscope's lights suddenly went out. Barton was left

THESE ARE BARTON'S SKETCHES OF THE THINGS HE SAW

THESE ARE THE ANIMALS HE THINKS THEY MAY HAVE BEEN

BULLET-SHAPED FORM with the trailing tentacles (top) was probably a luminescent squid like one in photograph (bottom) taken at Bermuda by Dr. William Beebe.

CIRCLE OF LIGHTS looked to Barton like luminous spots around mouth of an angler fish, a denizen of the dark depths which has glowing lure to attract the fish it eats.

ROWS OF BLUE DOTS looked like the lantern fish Barton had seen during dives in the Atlantic Ocean. It is four inches long, may use glistening lights to attract a mate.

AT BOTTOM OF THE PACIFIC OCEAN

in intense darkness broken only by eerie flashes of light given off by the ghostly looking animals that passed his window. At this point Barton had already broken the world's diving record of 3,028 feet, set by himself and Dr. William Beebe in 1934. But after a moment's hesitation he gave the order for the benthoscope to be dropped lower. A minute later his flashlight picked up a puddle of water at his feet. It took him several breathless seconds to realize that the water came from condensation and not from a leak.

At 4,100 feet, Barton reported, "I won't look at the window right now because it gives me rather an unsteady feeling. . . . This seasick feeling is probably due to the rocking of the ball. . . . I hear a continual crunching of the cable." At 4,500 feet: "I'll look now. . . . There's a triangular light with a glow behind it and a line in front. . . . I've got my face right in the window now. . . . A globular shape did a jig in front of the window. . . . I'm going to change my position. . . . It's very uncomfortable. . . . It's the nerve strain, the eye strain from the movement of the organisms." After eight minutes at 4,500 feet, Barton was asked if he wanted to come up. He replied, "If we had the lights on, I wouldn't hesitate, I would go right on down because I'd like to see what—but it's pointless to go to 6,000 feet without lights, so I guess I'd better come up."

INSIDE THE BENTHOSCOPE the walls and floors are lined with equipment. Oxygen tanks revitalize the air and the trays of soda lime absorb the carbon dioxide which Barton exhales. In case failure of the power line should stop the big fan (as it actually did during the dive) Barton rigged a fan to dry cell batteries to keep the air circulating.

A PAIR OF GLOWING SPOTS with projecting rays might represent a front view of lights behind eyes and extended fins of a dragon fish shown in side view (bottom).

RODLIKE SHAPE with lights could have been a ctenophore—a low order marine animal which feeds on tiny shrimp and has similar rows of glowing spots along its body.

CLUSTERED, GLISTENING BLOBS looked to Barton like a drifting colony of the delicate, transparent, jellyfishlike siphonophores shown in the photograph below.

"WE ARE OF THE WEST"

ADENAUER SPEAKS

DR. KONRAD ADENAUER, leader of Christian Democrats in western Germany, will head government of new republic. Conservative and anti-Nazi, he opposes socialism, advocates decentralized state.

NEWLY ELECTED GERMAN CHANCELLOR GIVES STATEMENT TO "LIFE"

by DR. KONRAD ADENAUER

The German people have grown up politically. They proved this, in my opinion, not only by their large participation in the election of August 14, but also by their clear-cut decision for the parties of the center. The nationalistic undercurrents evident in pre-election exhortations were by no means so important as foreign press accounts made them appear to be. The nationalistic line will be represented in the new government only by five delegates out of a total of 402. Having voted overwhelmingly for parliamentary democracy and European cooperation, it is likewise clear that a considerable majority of Germans have felt the growing power of Christian Democratic thought. At the same time we note, in Germany as elsewhere, a corresponding abandonment of socialism and its doctrines of planned economy. The same trend is visible in Belgium, and to an increasing degree in Socialist Britain. Needless to say, the same applies to Communism.

An eastern bulwark

During the recent election campaign I emphasized that Germany can be reconstructed on a sound basis only if she declares herself wholeheartedly for the Christian world of the West and all it stands for. Our position in that world makes us the eastern bulwark of a free and democratic Europe against those parts of the Continent dominated by Communism, and it is my belief that America, as a member of the Atlantic world, must have a strong interest in giving Germany the protection she needs.

The Christian Democratic Union gratefully recognizes the actions already undertaken by the allied nations, chief among them the U.S., to strengthen Germany's economic capacities. Without the food furnished in the tragic years from 1945 to 1948, the German people might have suffered a catastrophic famine. We have further recognized the significance of Marshall Plan aid, without which the democratic ideal in Germany would scarcely have found fertile soil in which to grow. We also believe that our new government must exert itself to the utmost to assure that Germans, instead of living on foreign charity, may soon earn their own living through increased exports. In the long run Germany cannot be dependent on relief money provided by the American taxpayer. A beggar who, though fit to work, appears repeatedly on the doorstep requesting alms must inevitably be despised by the most benevolent benefactor.

By intensifying German production and increasing German exports, the CDU intends to build up a capable and competitive economy based on the economic policies already initiated, the principles of which are free private initiative and profit sharing for the worker. These policies have already freed industry, trade and commerce from the shackles of a state-controlled economy. At the same time the CDU must aid in mitigating the distress of all those victims of time and circumstances who lack the strength to build up on their own a new and prosperous existence. The most important task of the new parliament and government will be the construction of housing. The present catastrophic housing situation severely endangers family and community life.

The new government must press for the internationally guaranteed return of the expelled to their former homes. On the basis of international law the CDU can never agree to recognize the German-Polish frontier arbitrarily drawn along the Oder-Neisse line. I wish to stress emphatically that this question concerns the whole of Europe. These eastern German provinces with their enormous resources in food and raw materials represent an important factor in the European economy. The press of refugees from these eastern territories inside Germany, furthermore, creates a dangerous focal point of political unrest.

Another danger point must not be overlooked: I can well imagine that by 1952, when Marshall aid ends, Germany's exports will not yet have reached the point where they can pay for her necessary imports. To avoid increasing internal difficulties resulting from a rapid lowering of Germany's standard of living at this point, the U.S. should now plan certain preventive measures. It must not be forgotten that the suffering masses of Germany are an easy prey to Communist propaganda. In this connection the policy of continued dismantling is of particular importance. It is absolutely incomprehensible that four years after the war and at a time when the whole world is convinced that only increased production can save Europe, German workmen should be forced in the name of war reparations to dismantle German plants which have nothing to do with war production. Germany's industrial potential is still considerable. It should be integrated with that of the Western world and linked with the great industrial centers of the U.S.

Exchange of youth

These closer economic relations between our nations should be followed by closer educational and cultural ties. An exchange of German youth with the youth of all nations is of vital importance in leading Germany out of the dreadful mental isolation into which she was plunged by Nazism.

We are of the West, even though oppression, war and defeat have left Germany a pawn in the great struggle of the Western and eastern worlds. In our relationship with America we are at the receiving end. But in years to come an economically and politically healthy Germany, indebted as it will be for aid from the West, may eventually repay these commitments by contributing her share to the benefit of the Atlantic world to which we all belong.

THE CHRISTIAN DEMOCRATS

THEIR LATEST VICTORY SHOULD EARN THEM STRONG U.S. SUPPORT

The recent West German elections, in which the Christian Democrats finished first, the Social Democrats second, the Free Democrats third and the Communists a bad fourth, have been analyzed from as many angles as Willie Hoppe encounters in a billiard tournament. But the really important angle has been almost universally missed. It has been missed because we have been looking at the Germans with an eye to their behavior as Germans (which is to say, as creatures full of menace). The surprising thing, however, is that the Germans, once they got to the polling booths, acted very much like the rest of Western Europe. They not only ditched the Communists, they behaved in a way to make one believe that a new nonsocialist "center" is emerging throughout free Western Europe as a universal thing.

The Communists got a meager 5.7% of the vote and 15 seats out of 402 in the new Bundestag, which makes them a mere floating fragment in the new Germany. But the Socialists—the anticapitalist, "planning" party—did not inherit anything from the Communists' loss. The Christian Democrats, nonsocialist for the most part, got 7,357,579 votes and 139 legislative seats, which doesn't give them much of an edge over the Socialists, who got 6,932,272 votes and 131 seats. But as a "free enterprise" party, the Christian Democrats are psychologically able to make a coalition with the Free Democrats and other nonextremist splinter groups.

Yesterday's shibboleths

To those who are still using the patterns of analysis that were popular just after the war, this election proves that Germany has gone "right." From 1945 until recently we were told that the Socialists represented the "center," or the "middle way," in Europe. To the left was Communism, which was to be fought; to the right was "reaction," leading to fascism. The only good liberal choice open to U.S. policy makers was to cooperate with the Socialists, who alone possessed the secret of democracy. So ran the catechism from 1945 to 1949.

Well, what has happened to the popular shibboleths of yesteryear? In Italy the Christian Democrats are now in the majority. In France the situation is not so clear, due to the Gaullist movement which has drawn many Catholics away from the strongly Catholic MRP. But the French socialists are a dispirited lot and are certainly no longer the French "center," which is distributed over a number of parties. In Belgium the Social Christians (who are not socialists) rule in coalition with the Liberals. In the Netherlands the picture is more or less the same.

All of this might constitute a drift to a fascist "right" if it were not for one fact that has been largely unreported in the U.S. This fact is that Europeans are taking certain values implied by the adjective "Christian" with high seriousness. Not all members of the various Christian democratic parties are 100% "practicing" Catholics or even formally Christian; some are probably agnostic. But the point about Western Europe today is that religion has interpenetrated with politics in such a way that people have been voting for humane values and good men, not for hard-and-fast economic philosophies.

Since freedom is a humane value, the Christian democrats of Europe are skeptical about socialist "planning," which inevitably tends to push people around insofar as choice and scope of occupation are concerned. But if Christian democracy is generally against the "planned state," it is not committed to laissez faire in a 19th Century, devil-take-the-hindmost sense. A discerning visitor to Europe, after talks with Christian democratic leaders (pictures at right), came away last spring with the feeling that what they stand for is "liberty—and morality." They want to use the tools of capitalism, but within the bounds imposed by common decency and enough social services to make life palatable to all.

Free enterprise Christians

The leader of the German Christian Democrats, 73-year-old Dr. Konrad Adenauer, is reported to be an "archconservative." But what does "conservative" mean when applied to German Christian democracy? The mentor of the party, Dr. Ludwig Erhard, the economic oracle of West Germany who brought revival by removing controls after the currency reform, talks the language of the liberal Austrian school of economics—which is extremely non-Nazi. The German Christian Democrats are for a federalistic, as against a centralized, political system. None of this adds up to Nazism, which gloried in controls and centralized authority.

There is no sense in going into starry-eyed rapture over the new European "center"; it has dangerous problems to surmount, and the truly liberal and moral elements in the Christian democratic parties may lose out to the more conventionally "rightist" elements in the long run. The Italian Christian Democrats may founder on land reform, the French Catholics in the De Gaulle movement might succumb to the man-on-horseback complex and so ruin the good work already done by the MRP, the Belgian and Dutch Christian party members might lose prestige in a time of economic recession, and the German "free enterprise" followers of Dr. Erhard may prove unable to deal with the heritage of an ancient cartel system. But there's a great deal of potency in a name just so long as the human being dislikes being hypocritical.

The Christian Democrats have been valiant in opposing the encroachments of Statism, but they need a more constructive attitude of their own. The U.S. can help by offering to cooperate with Christian democrats wherever they are doing their job. We were prepared to help the Socialists, with whom we disagreed; we should be more prepared to help a leadership whose faith is very much akin to that we profess for ourselves.

THE KEY FIGURES

ROBERT SCHUMAN, French Foreign Minister, is a leader of Mouvement Republicain Populaire, or MRP. A strongly Catholic but nonclerical party, the MRP opposes extreme nationalization of industries.

ALCIDE DE GASPERI, Italian Prime Minister, heads the Italian Christian Democrats in coalition government. He believes in free enterprise and bases his policies on the principles of Christian morality.

PAUL VAN ZEELAND, Belgian Foreign Minister, is dominant leader of the Christian Social Party. A liberal free trader, he is author of many plans for reduction of international tariff and quota barriers.

JACQUES MARITAIN, liberal French Thomist, supplied a philosophical basis for European Christian Democracy. He was once French ambassador to the Vatican. Recently he has lectured at Princeton.

GUESTS RISE AS SOARING ROCKETS ARE CARRIED TOWARD THEM BY THE WIND

ROCKETS GO AWRY

A rain of fire breaks up a charity ball on the Riviera

The sponsors of France's annual Bal des Petits Tits Blancs, a benefit for tubercular children, had hoped to make charity especially painless this year. They scheduled the ball for the Palm Beach Casino at Cannes, ordered 225 pounds of caviar and invited everybody who was anybody, as well as everybody who had the price of admission: 25,000 francs plus a bottle of champagne. Unfortunately, only a few notables—among them the Duke and Duchess of Windsor and some movie people—bought tickets, but enough were sold to the less celebrated to make the charity a success—financially. (Columnist Elsa Maxwell, who was there, of course, explained later, "Many people didn't want to have their names listed with the rich butcher and baker crowd.")

All this got the party off on the wrong foot but was nothing to the disasters which followed. A rising wind blew out 2,000 candles on the Casino terrace, where the duke and duchess and the butchers and bakers were trying to eat caviar, lobster and truffles. A surly waiter threw a salt cellar at Actress Michele Morgan—and hit her. Their entertainment was poorly paced and spotty. At 1:30 a.m., in an effort to titillate guests who seemed about ready to leave, the sponsors set off 10 boatloads of fireworks a little way offshore. The rockets rose beautifully, hung in the night air, caught the breeze and descended on the diners. Some people tried to defend themselves with chairs. Others fled. The Duke of Windsor, trying to rush the duchess to safety, had to wait a half hour for his car.

SHOWER OF ROCKETS cascades onto startled onlookers as wind blows fireworks inshore. The rain of fire caused a near stampede after the first few moments, when diners seemed paralyzed with surprise. In the confusion a small fire got started in the balcony of the Casino, and four dinner jackets and three evening gowns were set ablaze.

IN ROCKETS' RED GLARE, the Duke of Windsor taps duchess with a menu as a signal to leave. Duchess's aunt, Mrs. "Bessie" Merryman (right), seems undisturbed. Below, a guest protects himself with a chair as Actor Louis Jourdan, who has been called "the prettiest man in the world," looks frantically for shelter for his wife and himself.

SMOKE-STAINED WESTINGHOUSE PLANT LIES IN VALLEY NEAR PITTSBURGH

HOW TO BEAT THE COMMUNISTS

AROUSED ANTI-REDS OF UE'S VITAL PITTSBURGH LOCAL GET TOGETHER AND TURN THEIR TACTICS AGAINST THEM

In Pittsburgh last week the 13,500 members of Local 601, United Electrical Workers, C.I.O., held an election to decide what delegates they will send to the national convention. Because 601 is the second largest local in the UE, it controls a big block of votes that will be cast—perhaps enough to swing the balance of power and determine the fate of Communists like James Matles and Julius Emspak, who have long held a stranglehold on the union.

The outcome of 601's election was a resounding victory for the anti-Communists, who placed eight men on the 10-man delegation. It was a triumph for the democratic majority of U.S. labor, as well as a primer which shows how the Reds can be beaten.

Leaders (1) in the left-right battle were members of one family. On the anti-Communist side were union executive board member Mike Fitzpatrick and his son Tommy, union publicity director. Fighting for the left was Mike's brother Tom, chief steward.

Before the election Reds began their familiar tactics. First they picked their own slate, then tried to encourage the opposition to nominate dozens of splinter candidates. (In an election last December 100 men were nominated for eight jobs.) But the anti-Reds compromised internal differences, came up with one slate. Then Reds demanded the election be held in a small, cramped hall because a light vote would benefit them, but this was vetoed.

The Reds rushed organizers and party-line speakers like International President Albert Fitzgerald to Pittsburgh. When Reds "packed" halls with hecklers, opposing hecklers shouted back.

Meanwhile Pittsburgh's churches jumped into the battle. Catholic priests, in line with increasing participation of their Church in labor affairs, were by far the most outspoken, although Protestants joined in as well. The intervention had a mixed effect, alienating workers too. When pro-Red Tom Fitzpatrick spoke at union meetings, hecklers cried, "Stalin says no!" When anti-Red Mike Fitzpatrick spoke, other hecklers replied, "The Pope says yes!"

But the big issue was not Church intervention in union affairs. It was whether Local 601's democratic majority, heretofore outwitted by the Reds, could assert itself and take command. It did.

BITTERLY DIVIDED BROTHERS are leaders of pro-Communist and anti-Communist factions in Local 601. At the left is pro-Communist Tom Fitzpatrick. In center is Mike Fitzpatrick, Tom's brother, so opposed to his views that he doesn't speak to him. At right is Mike's son Tommy, who detests his uncle's ideas but acts as intermediary.

REDS "STEAL" A CROWD by sending truck with a left-wing barker aboard into a meeting outside Westinghouse plant. While anti-Communist leaders were speaking, the barker called on unemployed workers to attend another meeting. Laid-off union members were allowed to vote in this election, were a favorite target for Communist oratory.

IMPORTED ORGANIZER from Buffalo turns on the charm for the left wing cause as she buttonholes union members going home after work at Westinghouse.

ANTI-RED MANEUVER was staged by the right wing to open up other registration booths so voters held up by left-wing stalling tactics could cast ballots quickly.

PRE-ELECTION MANEUVERING (above) goes on with no holds barred. The pro-Communists wanted election held in this relatively small room where cramped quarters and confusion would benefit them. But by chance the fire commissioner found out and ruled that such a large number of people could not convene in a place with only one exit.

THE CHURCH SPEAKS OUT against Reds. Here Father Joseph Clougherty reminds congregation, just before election, that the recent papal declaration excommunicating Communists applies in this country as well as in Europe. Last year another Pittsburgh priest wrote a 12-page pamphlet called "How to de-control your union of Communists."

COMMUNIST LEADER Nathan Albert (right), who is secretary of the Squirrel Hill club of party, confers with leftist union officer Samuel Wilkins before the election.

MEETING OF "UNEMPLOYED" held by the left wing in Wilmerding Stadium was sparsely attended, and more jobholders than nonworkers turned up. The leftists' idea was to blame right-wing union officers for a deal with Westinghouse whereby 1,800 men have been laid off in the last two months. In the election only 29 unemployed men voted.

ALBERT FITZGERALD, international president of UE, talks to workers. Kept in office by the Communists, he has a long record of active cooperation with them.

LEFT-WING MANEUVER created a bottleneck outside the East Pittsburgh High School, where balloting took place. Only one entrance was open to voters. When pro-Reds in building were asked to open others they replied with a plaintive "Who, me?" Anti-Reds staged softball games in nearby field, offered free beer to help get out the vote.

VOTING AT LAST after waiting out leftist-caused delays, union members mark ballots in school basement. Thirty-six candidates were nominated for the 10 delegate posts. All names were placed on one ballot, and each voter checked those he preferred. Since pro-Reds elected only two, anti-Reds will have 127 of local's 158 votes at the convention.

AMISH RAISE A BARN Last month fire destroyed Ben Weaver's barn near Mt. Hope, Ohio, in an area populated with members of the Amish sect. But it did not destroy an old help-thy-neighbor custom among farm folk. Weaver's devout neighbors rallied round and held a barn-raising. The Amish women killed and dressed hundreds of chickens, baked dozens of cakes and mixed huge salads for the midday meal that was served to 750 people (above). Their menfolk got up before dawn, did their own chores, then flocked to Weaver's farm to do a chore for a friend in need.

BEARS' INVASION OF DULUTH Once upon a time, according to a postwar Italian fairy tale, a woolly foreign legion came out of the hills to stage The Bears' Famous Invasion of Sicily (LIFE, Aug. 9, 1948). On a smaller scale such ursine invasions are old stuff to Duluth, Minn., a city frequently sought out by bears as well as by fugitives from hay fever. But not even Duluth was prepared for the hundreds of hungry bears that have invaded it this month from cutover lands back of town, where the dry season has killed wild berry crops. Last week, on the 20th anniversary of one famous visitation (when a bear crashed the Hotel Duluth coffee shop via a plate-glass window), the city was bothered by bears

QUAKE RAZES A CATHEDRAL This picture of the toppling spire of Ambato Cathedral reached the U.S. from Ecuador last week. It was the work of an iron-nerved photographer who stood his ground while his world came tumbling down around him. Inside the cathedral a frightened crowd had sought refuge. Only a second after he took his picture, the massive spire crashed to the ground and the roof of the cathedral collapsed (LIFE, Aug. 22). When the dust had settled, 70 people (out of Ambato's 500 dead) had been killed by the crashing stones.

as never before. One ambled down a street, dived into the Duluth ship canal and climbed into a boat. Three men climbed out—one with a hole in the seat of his pants—leaving the bear at the helm (left). When another boat began towing the bear out of town to set him free, he foolishly jumped out, was lassoed, pulled to the canal bank and shot. Other bears appeared even in trees within the city (second from right). Many were scared away, some were shot and a few were marched off to the zoo (right). To placate the invaders and keep them out of traffic, the residents set up "bear cafeterias" on the city's outskirts. Such free lunches and the bears' own good sense, game wardens said hopefully, should bring an end to the bears' now famous invasion of Duluth.

KICKING UP A SPECTACULAR SPRAY, FURUHASHI TOUCHES THE FINISH LINE AFTER WINNING HIS 1,500-METER HEAT IN 18 MINUTES 19 SECONDS—39.8 SECONDS UNDER

JAPS ARE ON TOP AGAIN

They break five records to regain swimming supremacy

In Los Angeles last week it was like the '30s again. Six Japanese swimmers, the first to represent their country in any kind of international sports since the end of the war, had been invited to compete in the annual A.A.U. championships. They promptly regained the swimming supremacy their countrymen had once enjoyed. The Japanese team won five out of six free-style races (the U.S. could win only the 100-meter sprint) and shattered five world records. Three of the records were broken by Hironoshin Furuhashi (left), a 20-year-old Nippon University student who lowered the existing standards for 400, 800 and 1,500 meters, then swam the anchor leg on an 800-meter relay team that set a fourth world record. Furuhashi's teammate, Shiro Hashizume, also 20, was almost as impressive; he was able to set a new 1,000-meter mark while finishing a close second to Furuhashi in the 1,500 meters.

How did they do it? U.S. swimmers studied Furuhashi's unorthodox form with some bewilderment; his arms went round and round like the paddle wheels on a river steamer, seemingly unsynchronized with his leg kick. The Japanese coach said it was a matter of conditioning, and the Japanese had their own ideas about that (right). "Our boys train much harder," he said. "Your boys have too much life besides swimming." In any case the tremendous margins of the Japanese victories destroyed the complacency U.S. swimmers had enjoyed ever since they swept all of the men's events in the 1948 Olympic Games. Said one defeated American swimmer, "This is the best thing that ever happened to us."

"THE FLYING FISH," Furuhashi's U.S. nickname, is 5 feet 7 inches tall and weighs 162. During war he worked in a machine-parts plant, is now studying political science.

BOY PHOTOGRAPHER'S NEWS PICTURE

Ten-year-old South Dakotan snaps a racing motorcyclist being thrown to his death

Last week 10-year-old Alan Howe (left) went along with his photographer father who was taking pictures of the annual Black Hills Motorcycle Classics in Sturgis, S. Dak. During one of the trial runs, Motorcyclist John Kenyon of Sioux Falls roared around the north curve, skidded and was thrown into the air as the machine tipped end over end. Young Howe, his Speed Graphic ready, snapped the picture above just as the motorcyclist hurtled to his death.

The youthful photographer's father has been taking pictures for 10 years, but he readily admits that he has never got one as good as this. LIFE agrees that if Alan wants to become a news photographer someday, he has made an excellent start.

THE VEEP AND THE LADY

When Alben Barkley was campaigning for the vice presidency last year one of his favorite campaign jokes was about the unfortunate man who had two sons. One became vice president of the U.S., and the father never heard from the other one again, either. Yet Barkley has completely reversed the old tradition of vice presidential anonymity. Since Jan. 1 he has made 63 speeches in 21 states and enlivened more parties than an itinerant magician.

So it became a public matter when the 71-year-old widower twice visited St. Louis and called upon 37-year-old Mrs. Carleton Hadley. Mrs. Hadley's husband, lawyer for the Wabash Railroad, died in 1945. She is now secretary to his successor and is bringing up two daughters. Last weekend she spent at the Veep's home in Paducah, Ky. There was even a party to introduce her to Paducah society.

It was natural, even in Kentucky, that such hospitality would bring reporters to ask if this were to be the new "Veepess." This bustle brought an editorial from the Louisville Courier-Journal entitled "Anonymity for Veeps has its points, after all." Barkley, too, complained of living in a goldfish bowl, adding modestly, "I'm just an old channel catfish, myself."

But few Paducans took these complaints seriously. The Veep himself, they said, was telling and retelling the newest Barkley story. It seems Barkley dropped in to see his brother John, a grocery clerk. "John," he said, "do you know I'm getting into a romantic mood?" "Alben," said John, "do you know you're getting into a rheumatic age?"

George Washington

never

IF YOU'VE ever made a trip through towns whose history dates back to American Revolutionary days, you've probably seen proud little signs, reading "George Washington slept here," displayed by many Colonial inns and homes. Yet, despite his wide experience with the best that could then be provided in the way of comfortable beds, America's first President probably slept no more restfully than any other wealthy gentleman of his time.

Be that as it may, it's pretty certain that nobody in Washington's day owned beds that could begin to compare with those owned even by modest families, today!

For example, take the one in this picture. It looks exactly like its proud Colonial forefather—and it costs a great deal less! But it boasts a body-cuddling mattress such as no early American sleeper even dreamed of! Yet, with all its luxury of comfort and construction, this mattress is now a "must" in millions of modest homes.

Yes, and throughout the American home, you find furnishings of similar high quality and value—floor coverings, draperies and curtains—furniture, lamps and housewares—sheets, pillowcases and towels—all the things that help make a house a home!

That's because America's manufacturers have found the way to make more good things available to more people. "Mass production," they call it. And because national advertising has found the economical way to create the demand that makes mass production possible!

You may have wondered, sometimes, how much all this advertising costs. Far less than you probably imagine. For instance, in the case of the mattress we've been talking about, the manufacturer pays almost twice as much for the paper carton he puts around his product as he does for the advertising he puts behind it! And, if he hadn't spent that money to create volume sales, you'd probably have to pay far more for one of his mattresses!

• So you see, it's perfectly true to say that advertising actually saves you money!

And equally important is the automatic safeguard imposed by the very act of national advertising. For, advertisers know that the sales success of a product goes hand in hand with its honest presentation to the public.

MILLION-DOLLAR TRIO

Jascha, Gregor and Artur rehearse, argue and give four concerts

In Chicago in mid-August the kind of all-star musical combination that music lovers hear only in their most delirious dreams came together and played at the open-air concert hall on the lawn of Ravinia Park. At the piano was Artur Rubinstein, at the violin Jascha Heifetz and at the cello Gregor Piattigorsky. Individually each of the three stands almost alone today in the world of virtuosos. Together, as money-makers, they gross more than a million dollars a year. Their four programs of chamber music at Ravinia Park drew an audience of 30,000. The listeners were enthralled by their performances of Beethoven, Schubert and Ravel but would have been completely overcome if they could have attended rehearsals of the million-dollar trio and watched their arguments (next page).

IN CHICAGO THE TRIO REHEARSED AT HOME OF WEALTHY MAX EPSTEIN.

MUSICAL ARGUMENTS continually interrupted the rehearsals. Above, Heifetz and Piatigorsky move over to the piano (1) to settle a question of phrasing that Piatigorsky brought up. Piatigorsky makes his point (2), but Heifetz disagrees violently (3) and finally disposes of the argument (4) with a lordly sweep of his arm. Heifetz won almost all the arguments, but once when he said that a phrase should go "bum, bum di-bum, di-di bum" Pianist Rubinstein disagreed. "No, Jascha," he insisted, "it is bum, bum di-di bum, di-di bum." This time after much discussion Rubinstein's bum di-di bum carried the day.

MARGARET MITCHELL

On Aug. 16, five days after she was hit by a speeding car, Margaret Mitchell, 49, author of Gone with the Wind, died in Atlanta.

Since its publication in 1936, about 6 million copies of her prodigious novel have been sold. The sale, which once set a record of 50,000 copies in a day, is still moving at 50,000 copies a year. In 30 languages people are still reading about Scarlett O'Hara, Rhett Butler and the opulent old South. The three hour film version of the book is still being exhibited in many corners of the world.

Contrary to folklore, Miss Mitchell was not a simple housewife who scribbled a novel and hit the jackpot. Before she wrote Gone with the Wind she was an able newspaper reporter (next page). She had spent years studying the history of Atlanta and the war before starting to write her book. Partly because of the book's wealth of background, critics who razed GWTW at first admitted that it was better than most of the historical novels that followed. She was enormously respected in Atlanta—the flag on the state capitol flew at half staff, and hundreds of people crowded into the cemetery for her funeral. She was an amiable, shy woman who had harsh words for no one—not even for the thousands of readers who constantly pestered her with queries about what finally happened after Rhett walked out on Scarlett. To them she constantly replied, "I don't know."

FIVE-FOOT AUTHOR WEIGHED 100 POUNDS. HER 1,037-PAGE BOOK WEIGHED 2½

MAN WHO KILLED HER is Hugh Gravitt, here grinning in Atlanta jail. He has a record of 22 traffic violations, was charged with drunken driving, then murder.

HER HUSBAND, retired businessman John Marsh, sadly watches the funeral. He was standing with his wife when she was struck by car, just missed death himself.

SERVANTS AND FRIENDS attend service. Because her book championed South's past glories, innumerable Southerners considered her the world's greatest author.

AS A REPORTER in the '20s for the Atlanta Journal, Miss Mitchell interviewed Rudolph Valentino (center). Her editors, who sent her out on run-of-the-mill stories, remember her as a good writer whose work was highly creative.

MOVIE SCENE from Selznick's Gone with the Wind shows the burning of Atlanta. He paid Miss Mitchell $50,000 for film rights to book. This was not a large sum, considering book's fame, and has been topped many times since.

100 Years of American Taste

A gallery of popular paintings reveals an unwavering love of realism

"If more than 10% of the population likes a picture," said George Bernard Shaw, "it should be burned, for it must be bad." Risking a major fire earlier this year, Washington's Corcoran Gallery assembled an exhibition of American paintings the U.S. public has liked most during the last hundred years. Confined to work generally accepted by critics as artistically good, it displayed a glittering array of handsome, nostalgic pictures and confirmed once again the fact that the art Americans have always preferred is realistic and recognizable.

The American preference for realism was formed during the early years of the republic when a practical approach to life dominated society. With few exceptions, the only painters of the time were portraitists who roamed from village to village doing stiff and precise renderings of wealthy citizens who felt there was a practical use in having their likenesses grace their family dining rooms.

When, after the War of 1812, a wave of nationalism swept over the nation, people became suddenly eager to see the beauties of the American countryside glorified. In an upsurge of enthusiasm for art, they proved a ready market for paintings of the farm lands, the wild western mountains and slumbering panoramas of the Hudson River. The painters who satisfied this taste prospered. Galleries sprang up to sell their wares. Art lotteries distributed paintings and statues to thousands of American homes. And with the development of color printing processes America was flooded with good color reproductions of the most popular works of art.

On the following six pages LIFE shows some of the most popular paintings from the Washington exhibit. In spite of the inroads of the modern school of painting from Europe, a poll taken among the visitors to the exhibit revealed that their favorites today are still the ones that were favorites decades ago.

W. H. VANDERBILT'S gallery in his palatial New York mansion had paintings hung closely to add to lavish effect.

"PICNIC IN THE CATSKILLS," by Henry Inman, contains all the things Americans loved most to look at in the 1830s. Familiar settings that glowed with rich colors left them with feelings of peace and nostalgia, reflecting the simple, primarily farming society existing in America at the dawn of the industrial age.

"WAR NEWS FROM MEXICO" was painted in Düsseldorf by Richard Woodville, a Baltimore artist. He did so well with the Düsseldorf style that he sold all but three of the pictures that he completed.

RAILROADS symbolized period of westward expansion, yielded fortunes which paid for paintings.

'40s-'50s

Beginning in the '40s Americans found themselves living in an age of vast and sudden material accomplishments. They pushed westward seeking gold, produced incredible inventions like the Morse telegraph and built new industries which rolled along with astonishing momentum. In the upsurge of wealth it became fashionable for successful Americans to collect art as a measure of prosperity and prestige. For most it had to be European art. Above all they liked the meticulous pictures that came from Düsseldorf, Germany. Richly varied, these illustrated tearful love scenes, homey anecdotes and heroic landmarks of history. As the rage for these pictures grew, U.S. artists flocked to Düsseldorf themselves to learn how to paint them, and many returned to become rich and famous.

"CROMWELL AND MILTON," done by Emanuel Leutze, shows Cromwell (with sword) solemnly listening to Milton play the organ. Trained at Düsseldorf, Leutze was most successful U.S. painter of his day. His famous Washington Crossing the Delaware earned him a commission for a mural in the Capitol.

"MOUNT CORCORAN," high in the Sierras, was named and painted by Albert Bierstadt for William Corcoran, a millionaire who paid him $7,000 for it. Other pictures by Bierstadt brought up to $35,000.

QUILTED ROCKING CHAIR and iron flowerpot stand reveal the Victorian fondness for adornments.

'60s-'80s

After the Civil War, when the country's industrial economy again got into high gear, the U.S. moved into one of the most prosperous periods of its history. Along with the telephone, the electric light and the plush Victorian mansion came a grandiose conception of America which was immediately reflected in the art of the day. Demand for paintings turned to soaring, romantic landscapes and stately portraits by skillful technicians. The artists themselves stepped into a more important role. No longer outright imitators of European schools, they were judged by a growing public on their own merits. In fact one American painter living in England, James McNeill Whistler, evolved an original style that helped throw Europe itself into an esthetic turmoil which ran for 30 years.

"MRS. HENRY WHITE" is by John Singer Sargent, whose style made him the darling of his day.

"THE WHITE GIRL," by James McNeill Whistler, was ahead of its time, was denounced as crude.

"BREAKING THE HOME TIES," by Thomas Hovenden, the most popular painting of the time, shows a youth going out into the world to earn his fortune.

"OLD MODELS," by William Harnett, enthralled the public but the critics denounced it as no better than sign painting.

'90s-'20s

For the first time in the history of the country the art of painting spread out to the general public. The great expositions held in Chicago, St. Louis and San Francisco not only were a means of displaying the mechanical advances of the nation, but also served as gigantic art galleries. Their success led to increasing numbers of exhibitions and to a thriving business in the '20s which sold to the public thousands of cheap color reproductions. The paintings the people liked best illustrated familiar, often sentimental, scenes and objects rendered with precise realism. The picture above was the most popular one of its period. So many people stopped to admire it at the San Francisco exposition in 1915 that the carpet and the floor in front of it wore through. The still lifes of William Harnett (left) attracted such crowds that rails had to be put up to stop the curious from touching his painted objects to see if they were real. But by 1900 U.S. artists had again begun to change their styles (opposite page). Influenced first by the French impressionists and later by the successive shock waves of European modernism, they found themselves in the dilemma of producing a kind of art (turn page) which the public was not ready to accept.

THE AUTOMOBILE became the symbol of America after 1900. This ad for a Chevrolet touring car appeared in 1918.

"HAIRDRESSER'S WINDOW," by John Sloan, was quite revolutionary in 1907, but a decade later it became popular both with the public and the critics. →

Copyrighted material

"EARLY SUNDAY MORNING" (1930), by Edward Hopper, achieves the quiet realism that has become an American tradition. Painting through half a century of controversy and change, Hopper has not once wavered from his style. His work has a personal moodiness that pleases almost every taste.

'30s—'40s

The two paintings on this page illustrate the great divergence in American taste that has developed in recent years. The general public still wants realistic pictures like the one above. The loftier spheres of some art circles prefer abstractions like the one below. Between the two poles lie a welter of tastes and just as many styles to satisfy them.

Yet different as they are, each extreme reveals a relationship to photography which has presented a strong challenge to both. Realists try to outdo the lens with a sharper focus. Abstractionists try to suggest human experiences which the camera cannot record and to plunge even further than photographs into the mysteries of motion. The strange look of modern painting confuses and irritates the majority of Americans. But as it has often happened in the past, the shocking experiments of the present may satisfy the popular taste of the future.

STROBOSCOPIC PICTURE of golfer is an example of how photography widened scope of painting, showing artists new and exciting ways of indicating things in motion and producing interesting designs.

"TRANSCENDENCE" by Abraham Rattner, is artist's attempt to convey effect of motion by showing several heads seen from different angles at once. The result is strikingly like high-speed photograph.

OPEN, SESAME!

● At Ali Baba's magical command, the rocks opened to admit him to a deep cavern...

Today, Shell scientists are seeking a more up-to-date form of "Open, Sesame." In one of the nation's largest laboratories of Exploration and Production Research they are expanding man's knowledge of the subterranean regions.

Their objective: To increase our supply of petroleum. Crude oil and petroleum gases now furnish 48% of America's energy—almost equalling all other sources combined—and demands are growing.

In Shell's new laboratory, the sciences of geology, chemistry, and physics are coordinated with engineering... toward three ends. (1) Improving today's successful ways of locating oil... (2) Developing new techniques... (3) Recovering more oil from present oil fields.

Shell's scientists work in teams. One group may check the theoretical—another checks practical applications. Equipment is as modern as science can make it.

Radar is used when surveying for location of promising oil bearing formations under the ocean bottom. Neutrons and gamma rays bombard rocks to disclose their contents. In the laboratory, Shell's scientists can even duplicate conditions existing in an actual well. And, when they wish to study real oil fields, some of America's largest are right at their doorstep.

The goal, for these Shell scientists, is reached when they add another improvement to any of the ways of finding oil. They're saying "Open, Sesame"—in research language—to one of the earth's best hidden treasure chests.

GI HOMESTEADER MAKES GOOD

Two and a half years ago Dale Sprout and his family were shown on LIFE's cover (right) as they stood on a bare California field. Sprout had just won it as part of a 77-acre farm—one of 86 similar farms which the government offered free in a lottery to war veterans who had two years of farm experience and $2,000 in the bank. For two years the family lived in some old barracks while Sprout, a former pilot, labored to make his homestead pay off. Last year he made $4,500 from his crops, and this spring he and his wife and two children moved into a brick house which Sprout built. He has also acquired a tractor and a Hudson and is planning to add a machine shed and concrete sidewalks when this year's crops are in. His barley looks fine (below). He gets up before dawn to irrigate his potatoes and work on his ditches. At noon his wife Iva brings him his lunch and wields the shovel while he eats. He was frightened by a cold snap last June which threatened to freeze his potatoes, but last week he expected a good yield after all and another big year.

1920 REVIVALS include (left to right) the cloche hat, which was made memorable by Iris March of The Green Hat (Mr. John, Inc.); a raccoon coat which, here worn by a male freshman, is again being made in girls' sizes for the college trade (Esther Dorothy); a short velveteen evening dress which has the period's bathing suit neckline but not its knee line (Toni Owen); a yellow slicker outfit complete with Sou'wester hat and book bag, and a wool jersey overblouse with pleated skirt.

College Fashions

They stem from past eras and strange sources

and a boy's checked cotton shirt (Clyde's Mens Shop); a jacket (Tille Schanzer) buttoned high like Clarence Day Jr.'s and worn with a juvenile cotton shirt and matching stock tie; little boy's elastic-banded blouse with round collar (Adelaar).

To the classic college fashions which appear every August—sweaters, skirts, polo coats—stores throughout the country add some novelties which they hope will become raging fads. This year's hopefuls are derived from many sources, among them the clothes of small boys (cover).

Most amusing of the new styles will be recognized by everyone who remembers the lyrics to Valencia—frank copies of the 1920s' slickers, raccoon coats and short evening dresses (opposite page). Another group are reminiscent of the male clothes of an earlier period: the America of Clarence Day and the 1900s (above). If these last catch on, college classrooms may presently resemble a road company of Life With Father.

Here's how... Stan Musial poles out extra-base hits

1. Stan Musial's Firm Grip and powerful hands contribute to bat control that gave him National League batting title three times with averages of .376; .365; and .357.

2. Fans Grow Tense as Stan eyes pitcher. When ball's thrown, he has 2/5 second to decide whether and where to swing—2/100 second when the ball is in the hitting area.

3. It Looks Good! Stan starts his swing, eyes on ball, head anchored at same level; power being first turned on by a smooth, fluent movement of the shoulders and hips.

4. A Hit! His wrists snap for the final drive that got 46 doubles, 18 triples, 39 homers in 1948. Once again, Musial is snagging an extra base—and the fans are going wild.

Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals has three times been voted the National League's "most valuable player."

5. What a Mellow Moment when your own favorite hits one! Don't let it go by without the touch that completes a mellow moment: HAMM's Beer. It's smooth and mellow, an old friend of millions. THIRTY-EIGHT-YEAR-OLD Harry Huter is a slender, jaunty young man who has survived two tedious ordeals in his life. For five years he flew with the RAF and the U.S. Army Air Forces as a photo reconnaissance man. Since 1938, with time out for military service, he has been a regular driver for the Greyhound Lines, the fanciest of all American bus companies. He seldom compares the two experiences. When he does, he is apt to give bus driving an edge as the more nerve-wracking mode of life.

Huter drives a bus from New York to Pittsfield, Mass., in the Berkshire Hills, a distance of 159 miles. In the sticky heat of summer he leaves the Pennsylvania Greyhound Terminal in Manhattan at 8 a.m. Six hours later in Pittsfield he turns the bus over to another driver, who takes it farther north. On the next day he drives a Greyhound back to New York. City bus drivers are sometimes envious of the Greyhound man, who doesn't stop at every odd block or spend his day tangled in city traffic, pelted by a rain of pennies. Little boys look up to Greyhound drivers as men who wear uniforms and are masters of large machines which go "zoom."

To Huter, any idealized picture of his work seems inaccurate. He displays an occasional casual swagger in handling his job, but it is the bravado of a lion tamer about to enter the cage. The lion tamer can not only make a dash for the door if things get too hot, but he can also be sure that all his lions will behave more or less like lions. Greyhound passengers are unpredictable and Huter is stuck with them until the end of the run. If his charges decide to go berserk, have a baby, or pour a marathon monologue into his ear he cannot, like the lion tamer, distract them by firing blank cartridges or waving chairs in their faces.

The Weekly Newsmagazine
TELEVISION PRESENTATION

BUS DRIVER CONTINUED

At times Huter feels that he is running more or less of a psychiatric clinic on wheels. Few people, he has discovered, can get more than 50 miles from home and still be themselves. If they have resentments, frustrations or deflated egos, each additional mile from their native scene encourages them to throw their weight around. Brushed off by their fellow passengers, they can always pick on the driver, who is meanwhile busy sending his 214-hp. behemoth hurtling along the twisting New England roads.

Under the circumstances Huter's disposition has stood up remarkably well. He smiles easily and his smile isn't as sardonic as one might expect. He has not, however, any intention of spending the rest of his days testing his sense of humor in a bus. On the contrary he means to get out as soon as he is financially able and already has several irons in the fire. Even now he runs a little plumbing and heating business on the side. He would also like an off-hours job as a therapist, working with the mental patients at the Veterans' Hospital at Northampton, Mass.

Little time on his hands

MEANTIME, as captain of the Greyhound, he is everything from engineer and conductor to porter and chore boy. He takes tickets, announces way stations, loads and unloads baggage. On July 1, Greyhound unveiled in Chicago its new "Scenicruiser," a flashy Raymond Loewy-General Motors job complete with astradome, nylon upholstery and built-in toilet. When Huter heard of this last feature he groaned, "so now we also got to be plumbers."

Despite all these demands on his time on the job, Huter has managed to keep his eye on the road and his mind on the main job—driving—well enough to earn a six-year safety award. He has accomplished this in the face of some considerable highway hazards. On every trip he finds himself bucking at least a few drivers who should never have been given licenses. The average motorist will concede that he will come off second best in a tangle with a railroad train, but the same man often treats an onrushing bus as a mere bully, trying to bluff its way to the head of the line. Small egos which like to thwart large objects will plant a car in the middle of the road and feign deafness to the blasts of the air horn. Always pressed by his timetable, Huter must nevertheless outwait these playful characters.

On the open stretches, where he would like to turn on the speed, he must watch his step. The state police and local constabulary of New York, Connecticut and Massachusetts do not concede that a bus driver's schedule places him beyond the laws of the road. If he is arrested he must pay any fine out of his own pocket and the charge goes on his record with the company. If he has a head-on accident he has a Grade A chance of injury, for the bus motor is in the rear, not out in front where it could protect him. Unless he has a sound defense, he may also be fired.

No matter how alert he is when roaring over highways full of blind curves and wild drivers, Huter has no instrument to warn him that some young buck is about to fling a jalopy out of a side road. He never knows when an absent-minded mother will ram a perambulator into a crosswalk as he goes through small towns, or when a loafing car will start to race as he tries to pass. By training and practice he is inured to these perils. He handles his 13-ton monster with such authority that more timid drivers get bug-eyed as they watch him whiz past cars, clearing them with a safe but scanty margin. That part of the job is a reflex—if a highly developed one—with all good Greyhound men. The success of their conditioning to operational hazards is obviously borne out by the fact that in 1948 Greyhound's 19 divisions in the U.S. had .084 fatalities per 100 million passenger miles. The over-all U.S. bus line death rate was .180.

E-Z MILLS, INC., 57 WORTH STREET, NEW YORK 13, N. Y.

HONEYMOONING COUPLES are especially welcome passengers: Huter knows from experience that they usually put the others in an amiable mood.

In his bus Huter can expect an almost completely new cast of characters on each run. For the next six hours he joins them in a little drama. Usually the opening lines are standard—the questions, "What time does the 8 o'clock bus leave?" or "Which is the sunny side of the bus?" (This varies frequently, since the road winds in many directions, but he must answer politely, even on rainy days.) He may have to persuade skeptical travelers that the loudspeaker mentioning "New Milford and Burlington" on this New England run did not mean New Milford, Pa. or Burlington, Iowa. Sometimes he gets a quick, first-act crisis. One day a well-squiffed young woman, clasping the hand of a pretty little girl, climbed aboard and tottered to a seat. Huter decided to take them because of the child. A few miles down the road he glimpsed the woman stuffing an empty pint bottle into her handbag. She then passed out. Huter stopped the bus, moved the woman to a rear seat, opened a window and took the little girl up front with him. The child said, "Mummy and I haven't eaten for a long, long time. She wasn't hungry."

At Danbury, Conn. he bought a hot meal for the child and hot coffee and bromides for the mother, making three extra stops for more coffee, more bromides. He paid for this out of his own pocket and said nothing to the company, which neither gives rolling hang-over cures nor allows drinking on busses. At Pittsfield he had the satisfaction of unloading a sober mother and a well-fed child.

Cigaretts, yes; pipes, no

ONE wintry day a matron bustled up to complain that she was being suffocated by a passenger's pipe. Huter's mirror showed him an old codger sending up a cloud of smoke from a corn-cob. At the next stop Huter walked back to explain that passengers may use cigarettes but not pipes or cigars.

OLD MAN. "Whaddya mean, can't chew on my pipe?"

HUTER. "Maybe it was friction burned up that hot tobacco you got in there now."

OLD MAN. "Not smokin', I say."

HUTER. "Not the way it looked to me, Pop . . ."

OLD MAN (pointing). "See that, son? Got my shoes on, haven't I?"

HUTER. "Uh huh."

OLD MAN. "Well, I ain't walkin', am I?"

Huter laughed, and the passenger doused the pipe.

On both its north and southbound runs the Greyhound makes a rest stop in Danbury at a little diner. Almost invariably, about 10 minutes up the highway beyond its rest rooms someone comes forward and pleads with Huter to stop at the next filling station. Very urgent. At the diner the passenger was just too busy eating or playing the juke box.

One day, an hour after he had left Danbury, Huter was hit by a sixth-sense warning that something didn't add up. He checked the load. He was shy one customer. Stopping, he called out, "Anybody here know of someone who didn't get aboard again at Danbury?"

"Yep," said a stern, middle-aged gentleman. "My wife."

"Why didn't you tell me before this?"

"You said a 25-minute stop, didn't you? Well, she's old enough to tell time. If she won't listen, she's big enough to take care of herself. Proceed."

TIRE TAPPING with hammer keeps Huter posted on pressure.

A few minutes later a Fundamental quiz kid popped into the seat behind Huter and began firing questions about the Bible. He answered to the best of his Sunday-school knowledge. When he was about ready to call the child's mother to come rescue him from her moppet the boy said, "You're not bad. Know most of the answers. Now, just one more. Who was God's mother?"

In a Massachusetts village a jut-jawed woman beefed when she discovered the bus didn't go to the railroad station. Huter looked up sympathetically. "Madam, it's all the fault of the railroads. We tried to get those engineers to bring their trains over to our bus stops. They won't do it. So we refuse to go to theirs."

To the drivers who placate their problem children and wrestle these juggernauts 30 days a month, New England Greyhound says it pays an average $340 per month. Huter, whose mileage is lower than the average, gets only $318 although he has top seniority on his run. After his deductions for taxes, union dues and items like the pension fund, his take-home pay comes to about $60 a week. In addition, however, he does get 12 days' paid vacation and 12 days of sick leave every year.

Considering the complexity of his duties and the skills needed to do his job, Huter classifies the bus driver as low man on the transportation totem pole. A conductor on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad run to Pittsfield, for example, is guaranteed a minimum of $379.20 each calendar month. He works only on alternate days, reporting at 7:30 a.m. and signing off in New York again at 6:12 p.m. of the same day. The New York to Pittsfield railroad conductor can spend every night at home. Huter, who has a wife, a 16-year-old daughter and a 3-year old son, sees them on only half his working nights.

How he lost a job

DRIVERS on Fifth Avenue buses in New York get home to their families every night and do not have to work a seven-day week, but Huter envies them only their freedom to sass the passengers. He once drove a municipal bus himself and has no illusions about the job. His career in that field came to an abrupt end after a series of arguments with a customer who frequently complained that the bus always made him late to work. One morning, for a change, the customer was late and Huter didn't happen to see him plunge for the doorstep. He snapped the pneumatic doors closed, neatly clamping the man's neck in a vise. Huter turned in his bus that night and didn't bother to come back for the lawsuit.

The top dogs in transportation, of course, are airline captains. With a passenger load approximating that of a large Greyhound bus, a flight captain—who wouldn't lift a briefcase for a Cabinet member—usually draws $10,000 to $12,000 a year, depending on the type of equipment he flies, the terrain and his seniority. To Huter, who knows how to fly a plane, this is a gold-plated job. His war tours as a radio man took him to the China-Burma theater, Europe, Africa, the Middle East, South America, the Caribbean, Iceland, Greenland, Mexico, Central America, Canada and Alaska.

"What's so tough about that?" he says. "It was quite a bus ride, but you are way up there in the ozone, with all those little instruments to help you. Not an automobile in sight."

Many of his experiences with automobiles and their drivers are dramatic memories to Huter. He recalls coming on an overturned car in Bedford, N.Y. "Three people had been thrown out and were lying in a snowbank. A young boy was pinned to the road with the car resting on his head. I stopped, gave one passenger a light to flag down traffic. I sent another to the nearest house to get blankets, told a third one to call the state police and an ambulance. Men from the bus helped lift the car and release the kid, treated him for shock and wrapped him in blankets. The police came and an ambulance took him away. I hear he lived. . . ."

On another curve he says, "One time a woman went over the line here and forced an oncoming truck to veer off on the shoulder. The shoulder gave way and the truck tumbled down that embankment. I ran down with my fire extinguisher, played it on the cab and pulled out the driver. The man said, 'Buddy, take off my shoes. They hurt.' Then he died. I saw another trucker standing next to me, crying. I said, 'It's tough. . . .' He said, 'Yeah. He was my brother.'"

Huter's wayside adventures sometimes have gratifying sequels. One day after he had been warned to look out for an Army deserter believed to be cruising between New York and Massachusetts, he spotted a furtive lad slouched down in a rear seat of his bus. On a pretext he got the youth up front.

"Sonny, you didn't like the Army, did you?" he said.

The boy flushed, then blurted, "No. It doesn't make sense. The war's over. I want to be a farmer."

"They're on to you, and you can't win," Huter pointed out. "Give yourself up and it'll go easy. When I was in the Army, people didn't like it because somebody was always shootin' at 'em. All you have to do is wait out your time and come back to the farm in one piece. Is that so hard?"

At the next state police barracks the citizen soldier marched in to surrender himself. He has since ridden Huter's bus in uniform and on furlough.

He admires truck drivers

APPROACHING Rye, N.Y. at a good clip one night in the spring of 1947, when he was taking a Boston run, Huter saw a limping figure dragging toward him, waving. He stopped. The man was Ernest Florence, a driver for the New England Transportation Co., whose truck had been sideswiped by another one around the next curve. Although injured, Florence had remembered that the Greyhound was about due and hobbled up the road to prevent it from piling into the smashed-up trucks. Later Huter wrote a letter to N.E.T. praising Florence for his courage in protecting the lives of 37 Greyhound passengers and other motorists. His letter ended, "It is a shame we do not have more people in America like Ernie, who think of others instead of themselves; if we had, many lives would be spared in wars as well as accidents."

Shortly after this the Motor Transport Association of Connecticut named Florence its "Driver of the Month." Huter was delighted, since he has always insisted that truckers are his favorite drivers on the highways. As professionals they share Huter's interest in getting to their destination alive—a point of view misunderstood by nervous passengers who squawk, "Why do you go so fast on these icy roads?" or "What's the hurry about passing that car?" If Huter believed a road too icy for safety, he would stop the bus and report to his headquarters. If he were not certain he could pass a car safely, he would stay behind it.

When he doesn't have a troublemaker on his own passenger list and even the motorists are acting almost human, Huter can always work up a case of jitters by remembering the woes of other bus drivers. The driver is supposed to change his own tires (or call the company garage for permission to hire help) if he has a flat. One time a driver who was busy putting on a spare discovered one of his passengers had disappeared.

"Anybody see that fellow?" he asked.

"I think he went over back of that red barn," said a passenger.

The driver walked around the barn and bumped into a pair of heavy shoes. The absentee had taken time out to hang himself by the neck until dead.

The Greyhound driver is not, of course, the only person aboard a bus nursing grievances. The passengers have a list of their own. On the buses now used on the Berkshire run there is a deceptive steel rack over the seats. It is intended for parcels, small bags, coats and hats. If a large suitcase is placed on it a good jolt may send the luggage crashing down on the passenger's head.

There is also a step up from the aisle level to the seats. At night a passenger who forgets about this may step off to start down the aisle and instead fall over the occupants of the opposite chairs.

The chairs are adjustable to three positions. If a 6-foot man is seated behind someone who wants to rare back and recline, the seat will rap his knees. He then feels as though he were holding the forward passenger on his lap.

Some people object to tobacco smoke in any form. But all Greyhound buses are smokers.

Windows are easily opened. In winter the hearty type muffs up in furs and lets in blasts of air on his shivering neighbors. If someone insists the window be closed, the fur-bearing passenger complains about the heat. Recently some of the air-conditioning units (but not the heaters) have been pulled out of the Pittsfield buses. Since a third of the trip is spent in New York City traffic or small towns, some passengers are brought to a slow broil.

Any reading on the bus is difficult because of its jigglish progress. Night reading is impossible. There are lights for this purpose, but Huter usually cuts them off with a master switch. He explains that the reading lights create glares in his windshield. Cutting them off usually creates glares in the customers, but this, like all the other complaints, no longer bothers him.

Huter, in fact, is growing philosophical. When all events conspire against him he turns his thoughts to memories of half-finished episodes—the kind of which he sees only the beginning, never the end.

Once, on a long, straight stretch of Connecticut highway, he saw a car slough off the road, knock down several fence posts and sink into a bog. Before he came abreast the driver had slipped out, crossed the highway to a handsome house, opened the door with a key and stepped inside. The fence posts are still down, and each time Huter passes them he continues to wonder what happened.

There was also the case of the missing bridegroom. About to leave Danbury once, Huter noticed one man was missing. He called out the routine query, "Anyone know of a passenger who hasn't come back to the bus?"

A young woman hurried to the front and whispered to him, "It's my husband. He walked off down the street."

There are bars within a few blocks of the rest stop, and Huter asked, "Your husband drink, lady?"

"I don't really know. I don't think so."

Huter led her on a tour of the neighborhood saloons. When their man couldn't be found, the girl confessed she had been married only a few days and was on her way to a Vermont town to meet her in-laws for the first time. At Pittsfield he turned the bus over to the driver who then takes it up to Burlington, Vt. He reported the bride got off at her scheduled stop, alone.

BACK HOME in Pittsfield, Huter relaxes with son Harold Jr., wife Hazel (standing) and daughter Joan, 16. Most weeks he gets home every other night.

AT A STATEWIDE BEAUTY CONTEST GEORGINE WAS ELECTED MISS OKLAHOMA

Life Visits

A Suffering but Victorious Queen

Tulsa college girl finds being Miss Oklahoma means working long hard days, losing sleep and boyfriends

GEORGINE'S DAY at Tulsa University begins at 6:30 when a classmate yells under the window of her dormitory to see if she is awake yet. She yells back that she is.

COFFEE ON THE RUN is grabbed by Georgine at 6:55 in Student Union before her first class. With almost no time for social fun, she welcomes this chance to chat.

IN ETHICS CLASS, which begins at 7 a.m., Georgine yawns, not from boredom but weariness. To save time for her busy day, she scrapes polish off her fingernails.

AS A RECEPTIONIST for a personnel service, she answers the telephone, does typing and filing. This job earns her 75¢ an hour and helps pay her college tuition.

MEASURING HERSELF is almost an obsession with Georgine, who whips out a tape measure at odd moments to check on her waist (25 in.), bust (35 in.), hips (36 in.).

STUDYING BALLET, Georgine goes to the studio of Madame Eva (left). At Atlantic City contest beauties are judged now for talents like singing and dancing.

AT FASHION SHOW of the Oklahoma State Florists' Association, she models a bathing suit. Purely for ornament, she carries a bunch of oversized rubber fruit.

GARBED IN GARDENIAS, also for the florists' association, Georgine discovers a hole in bathing suit, which embarrassed her so acutely that she burst into tears.

Up until last June, Georgine Ruth Leeka of Joplin, Mo. was just one of 1,100 happy-go-lucky girls at the University of Tulsa. She had run in three campus beauty contests and won none of them, but she had plenty of boyfriends and enjoyed her sorority life. Then Georgine decided to enter another contest and to her surprise was elected Miss Tulsa.

Overnight her life changed, taken over by civic boosters who wanted her to become state queen. Georgine discovered that being a beauty is not necessarily a joy forever. Pretty enough to start with—ash-blond hair, 120 pounds, 5 feet 6½ inches tall—she spent every minute she could spare from her summer session classes improving her looks. Under the urgings of a Junior Chamber of Commerce man, she plunged into the grueling life documented here. Boyfriends stopped dating her because she always begged off to keep business appointments. She developed a harried look, a nervous quiver. Finally Georgine entered the state contest and came out as Miss Oklahoma. But her troubles are not over. Georgine is in training now for Atlantic City's national contest in September.

AT SINGING LESSON she wears a chin strap to keep her jaw from jutting out and is gently punched in stomach by her teacher as reminder to contract her diaphragm.

BATHING SUITS for state contest are tried on while her official adviser, John Marshall, of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, sits by to judge color, style and fit.

CRUCIAL DECISION as to which suit to get is made by Marshall, who will go to Atlantic City with Georgine. He is one of many tutors who advise her on weight, clothes, decorum and especially the tendency of her stomach to stick out. Cautioned one, "You think you tuck it in, but as soon as you start walking, out it comes again."

TOO WEARY to accept a date, Georgine decides to stay at home while her roommate Pat gets ready to go out. After Pat had left, lonely Georgine sewed on an evening dress.

LEG EXERCISES are done by walking on Coke bottles to strengthen muscles. Georgine was once slightly knock-kneed, but exercises have just about cured her.

TO REDUCE ANKLES, Georgine and roommate lie with legs on footboard and rotate feet. Georgine is so keyed up after the day's work, which often includes extra chores like the one on following page, that she cannot sleep unless her roommate, who fancies herself something of a chiropractor, gives her a back and neck massage.

...get top-notch performance from your electric razor

Amazing preparation gives closer, more comfortable shaves

Here's how to get closer, faster, more comfortable shaves with any type of electric shaver. It's Lectric Shave, the amazing before-shave beard conditioner.

You'll find Lectric Shave especially effective in the sticky, perspiry days of summer when close, comfortable shaves are most difficult to get. Cool and refreshing, it sets up your shave with a remarkable 4-way action:

1. It evaporates sticky, razor-clogging perspiration. 2. It lubricates skin for faster, more comfortable shaving. 3. It tautens the skin—"brings out" your beard for closer, better looking shaves. 4. It lubricates your shaver's cutting head for faster, easier action.

Free! Try Lectric Shave at our expense
Lectric Shave is available at your nearest drugstore or toilet goods counter. Only 49¢, plus tax—enough for 80 shaves. Or, for a generous free sample, just send your name and address to The J. B. Williams Co., Dept. LE-5, Glastonbury, Conn. (Offer good only in U. S. A.)

SHE GIVES PRIZES AND KISSES

AT A COUNTRY CLUB PARTY Georgine was invited by the Oklahoma Junior Chamber of Commerce to bestow trophies on winners of a golf tournament. As winners were announced, she found herself being grabbed and kissed by low-scorer Hobart Jameson, 19. While she blushed, Hobart yelled, "Wow!"

WITH A METHODICAL CIRCULAR MOTION MICKY GOES OVER A SAUCEPAN WITH A SCOURING PAD. FOR A DISHCLOTH HE PREFERS TO USE HIS OWN BARE HANDS

MICKY THE DISHWASHING MONKEY

A talented Long Island capuchin loves to work at the kitchen sink

For the past few years Mrs. John Taral of Queens Village, N.Y. has been letting her pet monkey, Micky, wash the dishes for her without ever thinking that there was anything special about having a monkey who washed the dishes. Then the newspapers found out about it and suddenly Micky and his mistress landed on the front pages. For days Micky washed dishes for the press, and Mrs. Taral suddenly realized what a household gem she had. "You could put a million dollars on the table for my monkey and I wouldn't take it," she told the Her- ald Tribune's animal story expert, John O'Reilly.

Micky, who has lived with the Tarals for nine of his 12 years, learned dishwashing by imitating Mrs. Taral. Usually he hangs around just helping her. When he does them by himself Mrs. Taral has to give some dishes an extra rinse. "He never breaks a dish," she boasts, "but if he gets excited he's sure to throw a dish at you." Her husband has a less intense admiration for him. "If you let him," he says, "he'll stay there and wash dishes for two hours, which is something I can't understand."

SITTING IDLY BY, Micky's mistress reads a paper while he washes. He cleans his hands by eating the suds.

THE MOST FABULOUS DISCOVERY EVER MADE!

Ninety years ago, Col. Edwin L. Drake's drilling crew struck oil in the sand and shale of Oil Creek, near Titusville, Pa. This pioneer well tapped a vast subterranean deposit that ushered in a new giant among industries...the petroleum industry.

Little did Drake realize he had discovered the most richly endowed oil region ever to be found. The Pennsylvania Grade region is so fabulously favored by nature that even to this day the natural quality of its oil has never been equalled by any other oil field in the entire world. Only members of the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association are privileged to sell Pennsylvania oils under the Association emblem. ## Dishwashing Monkey CONTINUED

MICKY'S OTHER TALENTS include catching balls thrown at him from across the room. He never misses. Though housebroken, Micky has some curious habits. "That monkey," says Mr. Taral, "likes to rub cigar butts over himself. If he gets hold of a cigar butt from the ash tray he'll rub it all in his fur."

MICKY WRITES in a notebook, turning the pages after marking each one. "Nice baby," says Mrs. Taral, who is childless. Micky will not go to bed in his cage without playing for a while with her. "And when I don't get up early enough for him he knocks on that cage with his little hands until I wake up."

It picks up money, bottles and fish

Rumbling up and down beaches in California is a new mechanized beachcomber. Invented by Vic Chatten, an ex-Navy officer and ex-Hollywood stuntman, it processes 1,600 tons of sand an hour, collecting and separating out broken bottles, dead fish, old bathing caps and an average of $100 worth of assorted valuables a day. Drawn by a tractor at a speed of a mile an hour, the Sanitizer has a series of metal buckets which dig deep into the sand, dump the loot on a conveyor belt, allowing the sand to fall back to the beach through wire screens. Besides enhancing the shore line, officials hope it will cut down the 12,000 cases of first aid—mostly feet cut by glass—which Los Angeles beaches recorded last year.

30-DAY TEST REVEALED

NOT ONE SINGLE CASE OF THROAT IRRITATION due to smoking CAMELS!

Yes, that's what noted throat specialists reported after making weekly examinations of the throats of hundreds of people, from coast to coast, who smoked Camels, and only Camels, for 30 consecutive days!

DOCTORS REPORT

MRS. ARTHUR O'NEILL, housewife: "I made the Camel 30-Day Test and enjoyed every puff of it! For taste and flavor, it's Camels every time!"

STEEL WORKER Cyril Byrne: "On my job, a good cigarette is a good friend. I made the 30-Day Test—now Camels are my smoke for keeps!"

LOVELY SOCIALITE Mrs. Thomas Phipps: "My search for a milder, better-tasting cigarette is over! The test won me to Camels, and only Camels!"

COLE PORTER, famous song writer: "The doctors' report proves what I've known about Camels for years. They're as mild as they are flavorful!"

TELEPHONE OPERATOR Rita Edwards: "The 30-Day Test really convinced me! Camels are the mildest, best-tasting cigarette I've ever smoked!"

WILLIE HOPPE, master of the cue: "30 Days? My personal test of Camels covers 20 years. I know how good Camels taste! I know how mild Camels are!"

JINX CLARK, lovely show-skater: "I put Camels to the test in my 'T-Zone'. There's nothing quite like them for flavor. And Camels are so wonderfully mild!"

STOREKEEPER Bernard Unger: "By my test, Camels are a stand-out for flavor! And they're mild. I know... I smoke over a pack a day. It's Camels for me!"

BOBSLED ACE Francis Tyler: "I'm talking from experience when I say Camels are mild. I've smoked them for years. And Camels sure taste great!"

STAR AQUA-SKIER Margie Fletcher: "Looks like I'll be stretching the 30-Day Test into many happy years of smoking Camels! They suit me to a 'T'!"

Camel 30-Day Test in your "T-Zone"

● Over and beyond the reports of noted throat specialists, the final authority on Camel mildness and flavor is your own "T-Zone" (T for taste, T for throat). Test Camels yourself for 30 days. See how your taste appreciates the rich, full flavor of Camel's choice tobaccos. See what your throat reports on Camel's cool mildness. See if you, too, don't change to Camels for keeps!
